The fabulous red Angus bull Red Mikado scores extremely well in Ireland for his Replacement Index as well as having high scores across all other major traits of the Angus breed. His maternal line notes good fertility and also scores well for milk production within the breed.

Our partners describe the bull as “exceptionally quiet”, which signifies a very good character. Red Mikado offers sufficient length with a good topline and is also well muscled. He passes on these traits to his progeny.

Red Mikado scores well for calving ease and is used for pure pedigree breeding and beef on dairy. He is widely used in Ireland for pure breeding.
